[Full text unavailable because of broken reference] A method for making a basic body of a fiber-reinforced plastic composite material (hereinafter called "fiber-reinforced plastic composite material") in which a fibrous mat in which a fiber-containing slurry is impregnated with a resin (hereinafter called "pregreg") is consolidated with heat at high-pressure to form a green (wet) body is proposed. The method enables cost-effective production of fiber-reinforced plastic composites (composites) for structural applications such as vibration dampers, vibration isolators, weight-reduced missile covers, structural parts of an aircraft, etc., which may be made in a relatively large amount. The following is a reference (non-patent document) and thus does not describe the invention: Non-Patent Document "Preforms for fiber reinforced plastics" John R. Reynolds CRC Press, 1992. Bärsjöåsen Bärsjöåsen is a nature reserve and open area in Linnäs Municipality in Västra Götaland County in western Sweden. It is best known for the Edelweiss bärsjöjakt, which takes place here every year during late June. Edelweiss bärsjöjakt The annual Edelweiss bärsjöjakt (Icelandic: eyja 1 bärsjönnuir þróum, "plow through bärsjömanth") takes place during late June. The event is held in a area southeast of Lundavägen in Bärsjö village. At the start of the 2000s year, all kinds of people would come to the event, as it was not just a bunch of hard-core teenagers who went on the hunt for the plant. There is even a proper restaurant, which is only open during the event. Many amateur photographers come along to take pictures of the event. The event is organized by the Edelweiss society (Sveriges Edelweissamfund), which is the only one of its kind. They also make arrangements for the organizations that have between 50 and 300 members to sell the Edelweiss. The Edelweiss has a special place in the society, being a state-protected plant that is endangered in other parts of the world. The society uses the money generated by the Edelweiss to fund conservation and natural sciences research.
