What's New In?

Visualize the markup in a vector-like format. Compare your changes with a handy color-coded comparison. (video: 1:15 min.) Export to HTML. Save your drawings in an easy-to-view, HTML-based format for sharing online. (video: 1:15 min.) (video: 1:15 min.) Post-Import Visualization Now include symbol types and dimensions of parts in your imported markups. These features are automatically converted from the imported CAD geometry. (video: 1:15 min.) (video: 1:15 min.) Additional Optimizations Implement self-re-synchronization: AutoCAD only adjusts new markups created on the current drawing. You can re-synchronize changes to drawings as they are being created to avoid replacing the existing drawings on your system. Show gridlines and snap settings in color for more clarity, but don't show gridlines on-screen during editing. This makes grids and snaps more intuitive, even for people who may not use the grid or snap settings in their drawings. (video: 0:34 min.) Share your work online Export your drawings to Markups and they can be shared in an HTML-based format. Plus, markups can be viewed in a lightbox or embedded with a file. (video: 0:34 min.) The new Autodesk Exchange plugin: Keep track of projects, milestones and tasks easily in an online account. With this new plugin you can connect your AutoCAD drawings with your Autodesk Exchange account to quickly share your projects with others. (video: 0:34 min.) Fast response: new queues for updates and check-ins help you track your progress and quickly communicate with others. (video: 0:34 min.)
