Absorption of deuterium in fruit. The effect of deuterium oxide (D2O) on the growth of several species of fruit was determined by the changes in the water content and on the isotopic composition of the water in the fruit. With fruit, D2O functions as an osmoticum and as a source of H2O, both of which are absorbed to varying extents. The osmotic effects of D2O on the water content of fruit varied from species to species and were in the range of 0.15 to 2.45%. D2O also caused a relative increase of the concentration of dissolved organic matter in the water of fruit. The uptake of H2O from D2O by fruit varied from 0.05 to 2.95%. Despite these effects on the isotopic composition of the water, no isotope effects on the concentration of soluble compounds in fruit were found.Q: Disable auto-submit for forms with css? I have a form in a file. All I need to do is to take the information from the user and pass it to a second file. So I'm not using PHP, just HTML, CSS and JavaScript. Is there a way to make the submit button "disappear"? This way, it would be easier for the user, and he wouldn't have to click the button. A: No, there is not. If you are a bot or spammer, you would only have to submit using a script and not an HTML form. But browsers show a disabled button. Which is a bit of a usability issue. And a third of browsers may not display that button at all. You could look into faking it, as some sites do. Or you could look into spammers filling out the form manually, that would have the same effect, but I think most users would accept that as no issues (well, really only for autofilling forms). A: The form will have an ajax request behind it, and the user will need to click the submit button. A: The button
