Werner's syndrome is a rare autosomal recessive disease with very early onset. The main features are atrophic changes of the skin and hair, premature aging, cataract and decreased visual acuity. Multiple visceral malformations, short stature, generalized hypoplasia, dwarfism, decreased fertility and immunodeficiency are also present. The prognosis of the disease varies from individual to individual. Different chromosome aberrations of the stem cells have been described. The genome is predisposed to chromosome breakage and recombination. A recombination defect of the Werner's syndrome gene (WRN gene) has been observed. The mutation of the WRN gene, a large multidomain protein, is associated with the development of an autosomal recessive progeroid syndrome (Werner's syndrome). This paper presents a case of a 63-year old patient suffering from Werner's syndrome.
