I have built it myself using bootstrap and css, so I can't change the code, only templates. The problem I have is that on mobile screens (iPhone, iPad etc) I have a small gap (1px) before I reach the headers that sits under it. I have no clue why this is happening. My website: If I look at my website on a smaller screen, the menu is aligning to the left instead of staying right aligned. Here is an image for it: I hope someone is able to help me :) PS. I have already tried to change the padding-top and a margin-top but it didn't really helped. A: The issue has nothing to do with your css, the first element in your HTML contains a height attribute that is causing the content to stick to the top. The issue is with your Nav Bar. You are using a class called navbar-default, however bootstrap defines this class as a navbar for desktop. If you want to use the navbar-default as you are using it in the desktop version of your site, then you can add this as a class to the section. ... If you wish to have it as a mobile navbar, then you will have to use another class. ... You also need to remove the padding-top from your navbar, this is not needed when using bootstrap and you also need to give the div a height, otherwise it will stick to the top of the content. ... ... For Mac OS X, this program is developed by IObit.[Study on gene encoding signal sequence of alpha-amylase from Nannochloropsis sp. N-1]. A new gene for alpha-amylase signal sequence was obtained by PCR from Nannochloropsis sp. N-1, which encodes a small peptide sequence that has high similarity to the well-known alpha-amylase signal peptide sequence that is encoded by the vma-8 gene from Saccharomyces cerevisiae. The gene encoding alpha-amylase signal sequence of Nannochloropsis sp. N-1 was inserted into expression vector pET-30a(+) and expressed in Escherichia coli BL21(DE3), its recombinant protein was expressed in the form of soluble and active inclusion body and was purified to homogeneity. Its biological function was studied, suggesting the catalytic activity of alpha-amylase signal sequence of Nannochloropsis sp. N-1.Canceling raids in Michigan jails LANSING — A group of Michigan senators will support a resolution this week that would end Michigan's use of a new national policy of holding mentally ill inmates in jails for long periods before charging them with crimes. The Republican-led Senate is to debate the proposal Wednesday that would end the practice of "emergency detention" for violent and mentally ill inmates, a change that critics say is unconstitutional and undermines public safety. The resolution is similar to one introduced last week in the House of Representatives. Detention during an emergency is permitted in 6d1f23a050
