Aimersoft Drm Media Converter Version 155 Crack 15

When the office issued a bogus email claiming it was a gift from Jon Bon Jovi? Rob Reiner took the initiative. He put in a personal call to the gift-bringer. The call made all the difference. "He just didn't know that the funny thing was that the gift was a prank," Rob said. "That was the whole point. We were being pranked." It may have seemed like a cruel prank, but one that the 88-year-old director said was a learning experience. "It made me stop and think that I hadn't really thought this whole thing through," Rob said, "so I wanted to say thank you, Jon." When Rob did finally get a hold of Bon Jovi, the actor had no idea that he was calling about a prank. In fact, "Jon" had been at the studio all morning, filming a cameo for the new cable comedy, Comedy Central's "Not Safe with Nikki Glaser." "I was sitting around waiting for my mug to show up on TV," he said. The show's producers had taken the time to print out a print on the back of the mug for the actor, so he could recognize his mug in the future. "So it was a really nice gesture," Rob said. "The line was so busy that they had to shut off the line and they couldn't get back to me," he said. "So I called Rob Reiner, and I was like, 'That's Jon Bon Jovi. Can I talk to him?'" The director had never met the rocker, so "I was a little frightened by it," Rob said. "Then I started to realize, 'Okay, he's a nice guy.' It really was sweet of him to call." Rob had been planning to prank Bon Jovi for quite a while. When he did reach him, Bon Jovi agreed to play along, as long as there was someone else in the room. It was a lesson to all of them. "Then," Rob said, "I got to make fun of him a little." After Rob talked to Bon Jovi, he decided to send him an email explaining the prank. "It was kind of a joke, 6d1f23a050
