Born in Buffalo, New York, USA and raised in South Africa, he is also a graduate of the Slade School of Fine Art, University College London, and was the 2014 recipient of the Arts and Humanities Research Council UK (AHRC) Prize, having previously received an Honorary Doctorate from the University of Leicester. Darcin has exhibited in numerous group and solo shows in Britain, the United States, South Africa, Europe and Australia and, in 2016, was one of the artists commissioned to create the designs for the re-branded 'Ivanhoe' beer cans. He has described his work as 'political' and'social comment'. Life and work Early life and education Norman Darcin was born in Buffalo, New York, in 1972, and is the son of South African painter Dr Darryl Darcin. Growing up in South Africa, he spent his early years in a Johannesburg suburb, where he attended what he has since referred to as a "very normal" primary school, followed by a private high school. Darcin studied Fine Art for three years at the University of Cape Town. He did not complete his studies, and after a period working for the art magazine Dealer, he moved to London in 1996. Career and influences Darcin's work is figurative. His large-scale work often deals with political and social issues. His most recent major project, The Treason Trial, took two years and was inspired by the trial of white and black leaders in South Africa who were accused of high treason for sending troops to South West Africa. The 'trial' was in fact a mock trial. Darcin was the recipient of the 2014 Arts and Humanities Research Council (AHRC) Prize and was included in the 2014 Turner Prize shortlist. The Royal National Theatre nominated him for two gongs at the Laure 6d1f23a050
