Are you still using the old Photoshop CS6 of the Adobe Creative Suite 6 software? Photoshop CS6 is. In this tutorial, Iâ€™m Q: Why does need '\ ' to set 'os.environ["LISTEN_PORT"]'? I use the code below to set an environment variable import os os.environ["LISTEN_PORT"] = "1337" os.environ["LISTEN_HOST"] = "127.0.0.1" However, I found that if I use "\ \" to set the variable, it will be correctly printed as ' '. I just wondered why this happens? A: This is happening because \ is a special character in Python, it's used to escape other characters. The OS environment isn't storing the character you are passing to it, but the \ string. When you use the same string with os.environ["LISTEN_PORT"], Python calls the environment with that string. The environment uses \ in the string to escape the characters "1337" and "127.0.0.1", resulting in . You can bypass this issue, by just passing the string directly into the environment. os.environ["LISTEN_PORT"] = "1337" os.environ["LISTEN_HOST"] = "127.0.0.1" Specificity of the antigen receptors expressed by immature B cells. We have used quantitative and qualitative analysis of the receptor and idiotype expression of immature B cells to study the relationship between the recognition of antigen and the appearance of the T cell receptor. The results indicate that the initial interaction between antigen and a B cell is not T cell receptor dependent. The limited repertoire of T cell receptors encoded by a single locus does not recognize multiple B cell antigens. New T cells do not affect the development of the B cell repertoire in the absence of T cell help. 6d1f23a050
