FTP is a bit of problem, because in our svn->live works like this: mysite.com is the live site, it point directly to mysite.com/svn/ mysite.com/svn is the svn, which point to the live server with a.svn copy of the files mysite.com/svn/the_directory is a copy of the live, where my website files are stored Now, FTP, i need to use a server like ftp.site.com for live, and ftp.site.com/svn for the.svn so i need to rewrite mysite.com/svn in mysite.com/ftp.site.com/svn The problem is, i already have some dirs like users, dir_uploads, that i don't want to rewrite How can i redirect mysite.com/svn to mysite.com/ftp.site.com/svn, and mysite.com/svn/users to mysite.com/ftp.site.com/svn/users? i need to leave in cache mysite.com/svn/users and subversion will keep updating it, but when i send a request to mysite.com/svn/users it will redirect to mysite.com/ftp.site.com/svn/users thanks A: You could probably setup a rewrite rule in your.htaccess file: RewriteEngine on RewriteRule ^/svn/$ type, but my IDE (typescript) tells me that the property needs to be of type int, but the value is undefined. My goal is to create an type, which is similar to Int32 or Int64. export type IngestionRecords = IngestionRecord & { adc: { measurement?: { recorded_at?: string; }; }; }; What I want to achieve is that measurement has the same type as recorded_at, which is supposed to be a string. But this is not working, since measurement has the type IngestionRecord and recorded_at is only of type string. A: You want to use a type alias, e.g. type IngestionRecord = { adc: { measurement?: { recorded_at?: string; }; }; }; The overall goal is to allow you to do a union (and later limit what you include in a union). A short explanation of why it's done this way: A union is a set of multiple types. Currently, the only way to write out a typescript union is a type alias that has keys of union types. A: You don't need a type alias. IngestionRecord & { adc: { measurement?: { recorded_at?: string; }; }; }
