"I still don't know what's wrong with you," he says, and continues to pluck at a handful of hair at the back of my neck. I yelp from the shock and the pain and the way my legs feel weak beneath me, but I don't seem able to move my arms. They twitch at my sides and send a sliver of my fear through my flesh. "You really are a dumb fuck, aren't you?" the man says. I cough and he releases me, and suddenly I can move again, and my hands scramble at my sides to back away from the burning at the back of my neck. I seem to recall Damon mentioning that Adam made Ryan the overseer of the Labyrinth, and that Ryan had gotten some of his power from the gods, but I can't remember if I believed him or not. I don't look up at Ryan, and I make to stand but my legs are made of lead and I can't seem to propel my body into any kind of movement that will make it beyond walking. I fall to one knee and shove my hands against the wall to prop myself up, my wrists throbbing where Ryan touched me. "You don't know what's wrong with me," I say, rubbing the place he burned me. "You don't even want to fucking help me. You don't have any love in you. I'm going to fucking die, and you don't even care." "Oh, I care," Ryan says, and my head snaps up. "But I care because you are in my Labyrinth." "You burn me because you want to know if it's possible for a person to suffer when I die." He laughs. "What's so funny? What are you going to do to me?" "You don't need to die," Ryan says. "I want you to stop getting close to people." "So you're not going to kill me, then?" "No." I'm suddenly more interested in Ryan's reactions to my ongoing life than my own life. I'm still and quiet, but I have 6d1f23a050
