June 25, 2006 - Humans communicate. Like animals, birds and even insects. We have examples of such communication in chirping. If we want to understand what is going on in the minds of our pets, we need to turn to the language of communication of birds. Much less is known about how birds communicate than, for example, about the language of monkeys. S. N. Lazarev, the author of books on an unconventional system of spiritual healing, offers his own way of describing the language of communication of birds with the help of "color-sound codes". This allows, without violating the laws of the language, not limited to the concepts of the language of insects, to speak about birds as self-living creatures.
