the city's population at about 600,000 and build large housing developments in the centre of the city. "We are right at the edge of the land and capacity constraint," said Nick Gisby, chief operating officer of Novascale. "The densification of the downtown area is needed to create the housing units we need to support the population." According to the consultants, the city's population is projected to hit 600,000 in the next decade. "It's about creating more housing," said Mike Cuzzi, president of Novascale. "We have to look at our density. Our urban core is not dense enough. You can find some property in the downtown that's over
