passwords. No professional hacker should ever try a password on the Internet when he has a high-quality password list. However, when the same word appears more than once, which seems to be the case, then you can expect password cracking to take quite some time. Therefore, I expect this password to take anywhere from a few hours to a few days to be cracked. The salt is a sequence of random letters and numbers. Theyre mixed up so you cannot predict what it will be and it will definitely not be the same if you try the same password later. This should make it hard for a computer to guess. And well get the password cracker off our plate in no time. If it's a few hours or so, then an attacker has to wait a bit to crack the Password, which is the most important thing. However, do make sure you protect yourself against brute force attacks. These are the simplest attacks that always work. Security researchers at Toronto-based firm Dell SecureWorks said the most dangerous new cyberattack type they have ever seen is the form of distributed denial-of-service (DDoS) attack typically used to overwhelm and disrupt a targeted website.

two weeks ago, a group calling itself the bangladesh cyber jihad hacked the bangladesh bank website and made a demand of $1.3 million in bitcoin to free a local journalist who had been arrested in connection with the country's war crimes. the group also claimed to have hacked the websites of the bangladesh central bank and the country's telecom regulator. according to new research from ponemon, 97% of it professionals surveyed have been targeted by cybercriminals who have breached their systems. this doesn't include the sheer number of people who have been the victims of malware that was installed on their computers without their knowledge, the survey says. "the number of individuals who have been targeted by cyberattacks has grown by six times over the last five years," according to the ponemon institute. hackers are gaining access to increasingly sophisticated tools, from automated hacking systems to those that can mimic real human activity. "many of the tools are now available to a hacker in their own living room," said cesar cerrudo, general manager of global operations at the cybersecurity company splashdata. "it's a different world that we live in." "the majority of malicious files come from the same sources," said john moore, head of cyber intelligence at the cybersecurity firm symantec. "the vast majority of files come from people." we've already seen attacks on hospitals, banks, and even the u.s. government. cyber criminals are always looking to improve their attack methods to make them more successful. they are constantly testing new vulnerabilities to exploit. the best way to protect yourself from cyber attacks is to keep your systems up to date with the latest security patches. 5ec8ef588b
