in a bid to make the internet more secure, facebook is introducing a new password reset system that will prevent users from resetting their passwords more than once in a day. the new system will also prevent users from guessing others passwords by filling in their name, when they first joined facebook, and their birthday. if you are using facebooks new password reset system and notice that your password is not working, you can change it by visiting the login page on the web, where you will be prompted to enter your current password, or the one that you last used. if you are unable to change your password, you can send facebook a request through the app, which will prompt you to enter your current password, and then send you an email with a link to change your password. that password will be sent to you so that you can log in to facebook from a new browser tab. on february 27, 2018, facebook launched a new service called facebook custom audiencesfor advertisers. the service allows customers to create audiences of facebook users with specific characteristics, as well as provide demographic data about the characteristics being targeted, such as age, location, sex, interests, and more. facebook also allows customers to create audiences based on demographic characteristics such as age, income, ethnicity, and interest. the service is a less expensive alternative to its advertising product called interest-based audiences, which is similar to facebook custom audiences, but is not as customizable. on april 16, 2018, facebook unveiled an update to its controversial custom ad tracking code, allowing advertisers to read, and sometimes post, on users pages. the feature, which was first reported by vice in february, allows advertisers to read every single post users have written on their pages. users will be able to disable the feature, but will be unable to change the default setting, which allows advertisers to read and post to their pages. facebook claims the feature is limited to pages that are in the range of 10,000 to 50,000 likes, and that the feature has been opt-in for the past two years.
