F/X for Memento is a new DVD issued by Minolta, the camera makers. They have completed the conversion of a two-hour version of the restored film for DVD. What is striking is that the filmmakers are insisting that this is not a straight transfer and that it is presented in a different manner from any of the directors cut releases. Memento is a DIFFICULT film to watch with the noise. However, this recording is almost ordinary-noise-free. Although the audio dropouts are frequent, they are brief and do not prevent the proceedings from being understood. The Dolby digital stereo sound overcomes the occasional noises to provide a vivid experience. This recording was made from a DVD which has been laser edited. The best source is the original DVD. The problems are not at all surprising and, in this case, the text is not obscured. The "L'homme est une machine" line quoted in the playback description is sufficiently clear that this is not the case. It is a little "low". The color is not quite right. Everything is a little too blue. The white of the clothing looks too pale. The legend of the Eternal Diva: The Nerd of All Time. This is the story of the eternal diva and her quest for the rest of her life. Memento 01 A.. The Legend of the Eternal Diva. Memento [DVDRip] - VOSTFRI

As an extra for "Memento" the director asked for an option on the soundtrack. The song was sung by the talented french artiste Zazie. In my opinion it was great ; having listened to it several times I'm listening it again on mp3 with a new ear for this piece.

Memento is the one I use for editing (other than the parts which are lost) and for DVDs I use FFmpeg. I always submit/submit, but have never gotten a reply. Anyway, it's here now and hope you like it. Please don't hesitate to post your comments, and for
