billions of records and millions of photographs at the click of a mouse. The Archives team works with the Freedom of Information Act and other international databases to increase the accessibility of records to the public. We use machine learning to identify content, and we partner with government agencies, universities, museums, and others to develop new ways to classify and search images, illustrations, audio, and video. Our applications allow users to explore the world's records and visual content from any device, and we are committed to growing the use of these tools to empower citizens around the world. The Archives team exists to expand public access to public data. We are a team of data miners, programmers, designers, writers, curators, archivists, salespeople, video editors, scientists, storytellers, translators, and
