
Washburn Serial Numbers !!INSTALL!!

The long-awaited Washburn electric guitar design was first presented in 1976. The company's first electric was a completely-constructed instrument and featured a full-size, mahogany-finished body with full figured maple back and sides and a mahogany neck with three-ply dot inlays. The 1957-issued EP-1000 was based on this design, but evolved into the first successful commercial mass-produced electric guitar. The world's first multi-colored round electric guitar was introduced in the early 1980s. These instruments were made available in three neck widths: 22, 21.5 and 21 1/2" at the time, and featured single pick-ups with two ceramic magnets. The colors were: Solid - #0170; Maroon - #0239; Blue - #0259; Green - #0340; Jade - #0359; Yellow - #0397; Orange - #0519. All EPs were made in Japan and were discontinued in the U.S. in 1984. The modern Washburn V-model EP line was introduced in 1985. Production was initiated in the US, whereas the Japanese instruments remained only for export. The Washburn engineer in charge of the design and development of this line was Michael Brant, a former member of several famous guitar groups. In 1984 he was the director of engineering at B.C. Rich. In 1989 he returned to B.C. Rich and is currently Head of Quality and Design. Michael has been instrumental in many improvements to Washburn guitars, including the development of some of our most popular and successful models. The instruments in this series use a two part construction; a neck and a body. One of the most important parts of a Washburn electric guitar is the neck, which is made of mahogany wood with an increase in body depth at the 1st fret. This increases the life span of the instrument and provides a musical and characterful instrument. A Washburn guitar has a uniquely warm tone and provide superior projection at high volume levels. These instruments are also made from quality materials. The necks are maple with a 3/4" radius joint at the heel and a cutaway veneer along the front edge. Construction is luthier-grade, using the finest wood and expertly shaped parts with an arched headstock. The rosewood fingerboard is unbound and features a 22-fret fingerboard with 22 medium jumbo frets and dot inlays on the fingerboard. The neck is attached to a body made of mahogany. The body has a cutaway solid maple top with a 3/4" radius joint at the heel.

Washburn Serial Numbers

Ike (Back to top of page) Every US made Ike out of a 80s or 90s model carries a two-digit serial number that is stamped on the face of the headstock. The first digit of the serial number identifies the year made while the last digit of the serial number is the production number of the model. This allowed the factory to make hundreds of identical models under the same number and move production from model to model

during the same year. Like guitars made from the 1920s
to 1950s and imported from China
follow this pattern
and are described in detail here: Gibson
(Back to top of page)
During the 70s and 80s Gibson made a number of reissue

models. The lack of a serial number and the insensitivity to date made these difficult to date. The numbers were something like (for a 1959 model): S-6-1958. S-6 denotes the model number. The second number denotes the year made. The third number may be a model number, a serial number, a set number, a date, or it may change with the date. It may be 1, 2, or 3 digits long. The following is the decode of a Kupke 1961 model: Kupke (Back to top of page)

I'm not sure if they have a serial number on any Kupke guitars, but in any case I don't think they were made in the USA. There was a Kupke branded Kay acoustic introduced by Harmony in 1983 and, according to Harmony, these models contained a CTS pickup. I have seen a Kupke

branded country
hybrid electric guitar
which has the number 67876
painted on the pick
guard/neck plate,
and a Harmony
branded Kupke guitar with a serial number

on the headstock
which starts at 68
which suggests that the guitar was made in 1986. The serial number is H078.
However, H078 is probably not a serial number but a model
number, as the Harmony model starts with H (see photo). If that is the case, then the '68' probably indicates the year, not the model, so the Kupke branded Harmony guitar may have been made in 1988.

If the number is a serial number, then it would be one of the guitars made in 1986

that look like an early Kupke. This would suggest that the Harmony Kupke
guitars are being marked as Kupke
branded guitars even though they are not made in the USA by Harmony. The guitar
shown in the photo
has a Kupke label, which usually has numbers on the body and headstock. Although I'm not sure about the specific number on the label, it would be appreciated if someone could provide a photo of the Kupke guitar with a serial number on the headstock. 5ec8ef588b
