in some countries, a negative lens is a strong prescription for people with very short sight. for instance, in france, the standard prescription for shortsightedness is -6 diopters (but this can vary depending on the manufacturer). in fact, there is a trend among optical professionals to prescribe -6 diopters for people with shortsightedness, especially those who want to wear glasses for their entire life. however, -6 diopters is a strong prescription for near-sightedness, and the long-term use of -6 diopters lenses can lead to blurred vision and headaches. it is important to mention that the prescription power of the lens should be adjusted according to the prescription power of your prescription eyeglasses. for example, a prescription eyeglass lens will have a -2.50 diopters power. if you wear a -6.00 diopters lens, you will end up having -2.50 diopters of positive power, which means that the strength of your prescription will be +2.50 diopters (so +2.50 diopters for near vision). for people who want to reduce the risk of developing eye problems such as cataracts, you should wear glasses with an anti-reflection coating on the lenses. anti-reflection lenses are available in the essilor range of products, and they help to reduce glare from lamps or sunlight by creating an even surface on the lens. essilor has partnered with most of the top brands to produce exclusive, high quality prescription eyewear for their customers. with every purchase, you have the assurance that your eyes are in the best of hands. from varilux to transitions, crizal, essilor, prescription safety eyewear, and more - we have it all in one place, at essilor prescription safety eyewear.
