there are three different types of applications that have been ported. they are covered by the "sr2000hdaceloader_testsuite", "sr2000hdaceloader_qoidc", and "sr2000hdaceloader_qoidc_debug" suites. "sr2000hdaceloader_testsuite" suite is the most complete - it has the lowest bootloader requirement and consequently it can boot the google hardened android development kernel with a standard frt as well. "sr2000hdaceloader_qoidc" suite is the next - it is more of a "test only" suite and requires the ability to flash the google hardened android development kernel's ost bootloader, which is not necessary to develop the applications on the "sr2000hdaceloader_testsuite" suite. finally, "sr2000hdaceloader_qoidc_debug" suite is almost complete - it only requires the ost bootloader and the "qoidc" system. the google hardened android development kernel and the "qoidc" system are detailed in invalid/kernel/docs/hardened/bootloader/ramdisk_program_bswap.txt and developers.google.com/android/nexus/images/qoidc/bootloader. the audio playback, recording and midi support is done by the sndfile library. this plugin wraps the api calls to the low-level library using aux i/o through a pd specific library. a callback is possible to do buffering and stereo mixing of the input, using the pugsndfile library. in this way the sr2000 will perform stereo mixing and application of mp3 compression on the audio stream. to control the audio system, we recommend using pugixml.pugixml, which is a very fast xml parser. this document, and the package it describes, will undoubtedly contain bugs and other problems. please report such in the category pugsndfile of the tcllib trackers. please also report any ideas for enhancements you may have for either package and/or documentation.
